We live in a time of unprecedented environmental change, global temperatures are rising, the extinction of species is an ongoing problem and yet we depend completely on good quality habitats to support food production and continued healthy lives.

In this series of walks and talks Dr. Ken Boyle of TU Dublin will use the park to explore four key environmental themes of our times, climate change, invasive species, ecosystem services and biodiversity. The walks and talk act as an introduction to the topics and some support material will be available.
